WINES INFLUENCED BY WATER

Wines influenced by the sea have a real freshness and purity, making them the perfect partner to our local seafood. The soils are packed with fossilized shells which, when combined with the salty influence of the sea, helps to create wines of real character. The cooling influence of oceans, rivers & lakes also enables the Holy Grail of balance in wines, bringing mouth-watering acidity that will draw you back in, sip after sip.

Muscadet sur Lie, La Griffe, Chéreau Carré - C Loire France 30

The original shellfish wine. Although coastal the wine takes its name from the two rivers running through the region. This is a 'Sur Lie' style which means the wine sits on the yeast cells for 6 months to add extra richness. It's this richness, when married with the grape's bracing acidity, that make it the perfect dance partner to our shellfish.

Entre-Deux-Mers, Château Lestrière (Sauvignon) - F Bordeaux France 35.5

Sandwiched between the rivers of the Dordogne and the Garonne this is a Sauvignon with real freshness. I say Sauvignon but in fact there's a few other varieties thrown into the mix, such as Sauvignon Gris and Semillon, which bring some much needed texture to the wine. A great alfresco option.

Picpoul de Pinet, Heritage An 1618, Gérard Bertrand - C Languedoc France 36

Picpoul actually means 'lip stinger' in the local dialect on account of the wines firm acidity. The vineyards border the Thau lagoon which is home to some of Frances finest Oysters & Mussels. So guess what we recommend drinking this little beauty with?

Nautilus, Aged under Water, Foivos - R 🍷 Kefalonia Greece 39

Not only is the vineyard within 800m of the sea, the wine is also then aged under water. This wine is quite simply unbelievable and will taste like nothing you've ever experienced. If you could imagine drinking Alsace Muscat in a rock pool then you'll have a rough idea of style. In simpler terms imagine zesty marmalade, stony minerality, and wonderful salinity on the finish. Finally this wine is naturally made, so will evolve nicely in the glass.

Txakoli, Hiruzta Txakoli Winery - C Basque Spain 42

This is modern Txakoli, so although it has a slight spritz it doesn't taste of cider like a lot of them can do. Just one sip of this wine will transport your senses to the edge of the Bay of Biscay with the Atlantic sea air smacking you in the face. This Txakoli is the definition of freshness.

Albariño, O Con, Xosé Lois Sebío - R Rias Baixas Spain 58

Albarino is influenced by the sea but more so by the many estuaries and inlets of the region. At its best Albarino is wonderfully aromatic with layers of white peach but this wine has added complexity due to the use of old oak. So stylistically this wine is a mid-way point between Albarino and white Burgundy.
